ALMA DUFOUR'S EASY RACE

CORRIGAN'S OLD STAND-BY RUNS AWAY FROM BESTERLING.

Avaunteer Heads Out Sally Preston in a Close Finish—Dew of Dawn and Belle View Furnish Surprises.

New Orleans, La., December 11.—Today's featureless racing was mainly attributable to the poor class of horses entered in the different races. Five of the races were under selling conditions, and three of them allowed the winners to get in with a selling price of $400. The feature race, which only had three starters, was further marred by a poor send-off that practically left Besterling at the post. Besterling was thought to have a good chance to beat Alma Dufour, the heavily backed fdds-on favorite. With the most dangerous contender eliminated, the Corrigan mare only had to canter all the way under restraint to win the purse. Besterling, despite his bad start, closed up a big gap and was an easy second.

The best finish of the afternoon came in the fifth race, when Avaunteer, Sally Preston and Royal Onyx were closely in line, only heads separating the trio. Avaunteer was much the best, but Mountain's restraining tactics almost brought about his defeat. Sally Preston was the favorite, and as the race was run should have won. McDaniel made the mistake of going for the inner rail, thereby enabling Avaunteer to get through at a critical time.

Divorcee was the only other favorite except Alma Dufour, to win during the afternoon. She was much the best and had matters practically her own way.

Dew of Dawn, at a long price, furnished the first surprise by taking the third race from Miss Delaney. The latter was favorite and could not have lost with a stronger rider up.

Vincenzo again showed a reversal of form. He was a prominent contender from the start in the last race and barely failed to win. Belleview at a long price getting up in the last few strides to beat him out. In his last start Vincenzo failed to show much speed and was beaten off.

Husted defeated a bad lot in the opening race with much in reserve. Delmore, the strongly backed favorite, had scant chance with the poor ride he received.

Fifteen objectionable characters were ejected from the track this afternoon by Captain Jacobson and his men.

Jockey R. McDaniel was suspended for three days by the judges for his rough riding on Sally Preston in the fifth race.

After the poor send-off in the fourth race, Besterling and Mortiboy were placed on the schooling list by order of the starter.

The riding of jockey V. Powers has not been satisfactory of late and other riders have been given the mounts on the horses entered by L. A. Cella.

Vestabella, which fell in the second race yesterday, sustained severe injuries which probably will cause her retirement from the turf. The veterinarian who is treating her, hopes to save her. Vestabella will go into the stud if she recovers.

A party of New Yorkers made up of Charlie Primrose, B. J. Quinn, Ed Brown, C. H. Davis and Claude Brownell, arrived this morning. They will put on two books Saturday. Primrose and Quinn will remain here until after the holidays, when they will leave for Los Angeles.

Jockey J. Lee was about today walking with the assistance of a cane. He will make an effort to ride on Friday.

Jockey Fogarty's injuries are far more serious than they were at first supposed and he is at present in a hospital.

SMITH'S BAND OF JUMPERS.

New York, December 11.—Courtland H. Smith is wintering his five steeplechasers at Belmont Park. They are Sandy Creeker, Navajo, Locked Out, Meddlesome Boy and Jim McGill, a three-year-old bay colt by Handsome—Marianne, which has only appeared under colors once, in a steeplechase during the recent meeting of the Washington Jockey Club, in which he fell. Mr. Smith has Pete Dailey and My Grace at Warrenton, Va., where they are qualifying as hunters and probably will not be raced over the fences again under colors.

JOCKEY MARTIN RETIRES.

New York, December 11.—Jockey J. Martin has made a final settlement with F. D. Weir, trainer of the Farrell, Sullivan and Johnson stable, and left New York for his home near Hamilton, Ont. Martin announces his retirement from the saddle and says racing has no further interest for him. He expects to make his permanent home in Canada and will probably embark in business next year.

BROWNLEIGH PARK STABLE HORSES.

Trainer A. W. Claxton of the Brownleigh Park Stable, has seven horses which he will prepare for early spring races, and they are now quartered at Belmont Park. They are They're Off, King Cobalt, Beekon and four yearlings—a chestnut colt by Royal Stag—Ragner, chestnut colt by Cesarion—Clog Dance, bay colt, by Glenheim—Fondle, and a bay filly by Plaudit—Pry.

MILLER TAKES THREE AT OAKLAND.

Rides Colonel White, Spring Ban and Lucian to Victory in Succession.

Oakland, Cal., December 11.—Racing at Oakland today began with an easy victory for the favorite. Salvage. M. J. Daly's horse fulfilled the expectations of several hundred observant race-goers and backers by reversing his previous running in satisfactory manner. After his auspicious beginning, unusually heavy support developed for Manchester. The outstanding odds-on choice in the next race. This misguided plunge failed of consummation, because J. S. Hawkins sent his hitherto fast and consistent Banastar colt to the post unfit to race. It was rumored afterward that he had broken down in the race. Aside from this incident, the sport was excellent and attended the running of the last half of the card by a particularly pleasing sequence of saddle successes for W. Miller. He began his good work in the fourth race at one mile, the Martinez Handicap, and before the close, had scored three wins in quick succession on Colonel White, Spring Ban and Lucian.

As the betting was both persistent and heavy on all of them and the odds laid by the ring very liberal, the layers must have suffered severe losses on the day's operations, despite the downfall of four out of the six favorites. There was considerable bidding up of winners in selling races and at least one case of claiming during the afternoon. Salvage was bid up from $400 to $800 by F. W. Doss and Spring Ban from $1,000 to $1,500 by C. B. Wilson, both horses being bought in.

C. E. Durnell claimed E. Trotter's useful three-year-old Jacomo for $1,400 out of the fifth race.

The Antrim Stock Farm produce of eighteen thoroughbred yearlings was sold at auction last night. The total receipts of the sale amounted to $2,270, a very low average of $126.

WHY ARABIANS FAIL TO RACE.

An eminent Kentuckian in a recent talk about horses and breeding advanced some interesting suggestions, and on this line of thought said:

"The breeding problem is worthy of profound study, for those who seek to solve it enrich mankind. It is not and never can become an exact science. I state this as an abstract proposition without going at this time into the ways and wherefores. I knew A. Keene Richards, who attempted to solve it by importing Arabians, very well, indeed. He was an excellent man, an enthusiast, and deserved a better fate than was his. As Senator McCreery has already said, he bred his Arabians with the very best blood that could be found in Kentucky.

"When his youngsters came on the turf they were badly beaten. Turfmen who disbelieved his theory, that the Arabian could fertilize the blood of the modern thoroughbred, allowed him first seven pounds, and they were beaten. Then they made the generous concession of fourteen pounds—equal to a double distance, and still they were beaten.

"Mr. Richards did not give up the fight. Accompanied by the eminent animal painter, Troye, he turned his face once more toward the Orient. He lived with the Arabs in their tents. He ate and slept with them, worshiped with them, and dressed like them, and all for the purpose of getting the best Arab horses to be found among the descendants of Ishmael. He studied and rode Arab horses until he could judge of conformation, disposition and type, and he was especially careful to purchase nothing that could not be traced in an unbroken line to one of the mares of the prophet. His later purchases proved as great failures as his first.

"Now, as to the facts. Mr. Richards did not comprehend, what every successful breeder must comprehend, that the horse has a physical as well as a physical organization and that these Arabs had no inheritance of a racing will. Having it not themselves, how could they transmit it to their progeny? It is as plain as the nose on one's face that you cannot make a good whistle from the tail of a pig, nor can you gather grapes from thistles, nor figs from thorns. Nature works more intelligently. She never performs miracles, but produces results through natural laws.

"The supreme trial of the Arabian consists in being mounted at midnight and carrying his master a hundred miles across the desert without food or water. In this style of racing he could beat Hamburg, Henry of Navarre, a Tenny or a Salvator. The truth is, the Arabian has not been subjected for 200 years or more to a scientific course of training and preparation to run one mile or four miles, and having no cultivation of will nor consciousness of power to beat all others that distance, he miserably fails when brought to a supreme test.

"A single illustration of my proposition, for it is important to every man who breeds either runners or trotters, and I am done. In Abbeville district, South Carolina, in the last century, there lived a large breeder of thoroughbred horses named Richard A. Rapley. He imported a number of the most fashionably bred stallions and mares that could be found in Great Britain. He was scrupulously careful in all the crosses that he made, and soon gathered about him a herd of pure-bred animals that had never seen a race course. He kept up this fancy through several generations of horses. The attention of racing men was naturally turned in time to this stud of pure-bred animals and a number were selected and tried. But notwithstanding their high lineage and perfection of form, they did not prove to be race horses. The speed which they inherited from their ancestors had been lost through lack of useage. The consciousness of speed and the will and ambition to win had died out."

FAVORITES WIN AT SANTA ANITA.

Ormonde's Right Fails His Backers—All Alone Runs a Fast Race.

Los Angeles, Cal., December 11.—A somewhat heavy rain Tuesday night rendered the going rather slow today, but toward the end of the day's sport, the soil was drying out fast and should be in good condition tomorrow. The public had almost a field day of it, landing five out of six favorites, all of which were generously supported.

The talent hit upon All Alone as the best thing of the day. The youngster nearly upset all calculations by taking the bit in his mouth while on his way to the post and attempting to run away, but luckily Grand got him under control before he had gone far. He won impressively and should show well here this winter as a three-year-old.

Ormonde's Right, an old offender, failed to make good for a wise few who backed him for a certainty. He raced encouragingly for a mile and then fell away gradually, finishing an indifferent third.

Only twelve books drew in, but were kept busy attending to the improved speculation, although, as yet, the books are somewhat hampered in handling "scrip."

It is confidently expected that the sport will be in full and successful swing by the holidays. Up to the present time there are few absentees from the racing enthusiasts of last year.

THIRTY LEADING HORSES.

Since the last publication of the list of the thirty horses chief in winnings on the American turf in 1907, but one of the number has made an addition to his total, that one being the fast two-year-old, Chapultepec. In the course of the next two weeks some substantial gains may be made. At present the earnings of the thirty are:

RYAN AFTER JACK ATKIN.

New Orleans, La., December 11.—Negotiations are said to be pending between Barney Schreiber, owner of the sprinter Jack Atkin, and John J. Ryan for the sale or leasing of the horse. Schreiber is said, according to current rumor, to have priced Jack Atkin to Ryan at $14,000, but afterwards reconsidered the matter and finally refused to sell. Ryan, who has been one of the most prominent plungers here since racing started at the big tracks, is now trying to lease the horse from Schreiber for a consideration of $5,000. What length of time Ryan wants Jack Atkin is not known.

It is reported that commissioner Gray, who secured jockey Gannon here last winter to ride for the Imperial Stable of Russia, will send over to Prince Libberwiskie, manager of the Imperial Stud, several other riders from here this winter if contracts can be closed on those he wants.

DISQUALIFICATIONS ON THE COAST.

At Oakland Tuesday the filly College Widow won a race and was disqualified for fouling, but was placed second instead of last. On all tracks of this country, except those racing under the rules of the Pacific Jockey Club, a horse disqualified for fouling is placed last. This is also the case in England and France, and it has been a rule of racing ever since racing rules have existed. But Rule 119 of the Pacific Jockey Club says:

"The judges and stewards of the course are vested with power to determine the extent of disqualification in case of fouls. They may place the offending horse behind such horses as in their judgment it interfered with, or may place him last, if in their judgment the foul was committed intentionally."

It results from this that disqualifications for fouling at Oakland, Santa Anita and Seattle do not always bring the usual punishment, although it is a matter within the discretion of the officials to place the offending horse last if they choose to do so.

GREAT YEARLING FIGURES

SOUTH AMERICAN YOUNGSTERS FETCH GRAND AVERAGE OF $2,790.

High Price Is $21,600 and Sales Total $962,395 for 344 Head—English Racing Comment and Gossip.

London, Eng., December 1.—The public sales of the South American yearlings at Buenos Ayres, Argentina, terminated October 25. Excluding those offered and sold privately, the actual amount realized by the 344 yearlings (colts and fillies), coming from twenty-four different studs, was 2,199,760 pesos, or $962,395. An approximate average of $2,790 for 344 youngsters sold.

These figures all round are in advance of those realized in 1906, when the grand total was 1,982,600 pesos, or $867,385, which gave an approximate average of $2,270 for the 386 yearlings sold from twenty-eight different studs.

The highest priced yearling was foaled at Messrs. A. and R. Luro's El Moro Haras, viz., Espora, by Orange, out of Espuma, by Wagram, which fetched $21,600.

Sceptre's yearling filly, which is now in training at Manton, shapes very well and takes after her dam in appearance. Many people used to predict that Sceptre would be a failure as a broodmare, because she was so hard-worked on the turf, but some entertained a precisely contrary opinion after seeing her lusty condition when she had been turned out only a month or two in the Egerton House paddocks, when she was on her first visit to Cyllene. She is now in foal all right to Isinglass, though it will be a latish foal. This mating was chosen when Sceptre was first turned out of training, and the result will naturally interest many. Sceptre had but one real fault and that was that her knees troubled her on hard ground. Fortunately there was nothing in the nature of drought in her three and four-year-old seasons, but in her five-year-old season she could not do herself any sort of justice. It is to be hoped that her foals will not inherit this infirmity, and that some of them, at any rate, will be in other respects as good as their dam.

The French correspondent of Sporting Life, writes: "Although starting price betting is prohibited by law in both France and Belgium, a lot goes on 'under the rose,' and police wink the other eye so long as business is conducted honestly and there are no complaints. I know one man in Paris, who has agents at many of the cafes, wine shops and hair dressers', who must take at least $10,000 on a big race day. In Brussels there is a syndicate that has its agents in all the provincial towns, and their takings are often over $4,000 a day. Yet, bettings away from the race course is illegal. In Brussels there is far more betting on French races than on Belgian races, and as everything is settled according to the pari-mutuel returns, disputes do not often occur.

"I can still remember when there was an enormous amount of betting in Paris on English races and, when lists were exhibited in the windows of the Rue de Choiseul, which became known at last as 'Chisselstreet.' All manner of frauds were perpetrated and at one office lists used to be exhibited showing betting on races which never took place at all. Needless to say, the winner was always a horse that had not been backed. But all that is in the sweet long ago. The Frenchmen have learned wisdom since then and have developed horse racing on their own account. They are now quite as sharp and wide awake as the English who have taught them the game."

The potency of the St. Simon blood in the English race horse is emphasized by the statistics of 1907. Sires of winners in 1907 which were themselves got by St. Simon may be divided into four classes, according to the number of winners of races and of amounts won which stand to their names. There are twenty-seven of them altogether.

The first class consists of St. Frusquin, Desmond, Diamond Jubilee, Persimmon, Florizel II., Bill of Portland and Collar. These seven sons of St. Simon are credited with 101 winners, of 201 races and four dead heats, worth among them $455,000.

The second class also consists of seven horses, namely Pietermaritzburg, Raeburn, Soliman, William the Third, Perigord, Tarporley and St. Serf. They have sired fifty-six winners of 114 races and two dead heats, worth together over $125,000.

The third class consists of Childwick, St. Maclou, St. Simonimi and Simontault. Thirteen of their stock have won seventeen races worth over $22,000.

The fourth class, which have each got either one or two winners, comprises Fitzsimon, Leisure Hour, Petros, Quidnume, St. Aidan, St. Issey, Sidus, Son of a Gun and Toussaint. Among them they have twelve winners of fifteen races, worth more than $8,000.

The old horse himself would be placed about the middle of the second class of his sons, having sired seven winners of ten races, worth over $22,000.

All this is the record of the year when St. Simon stands for the fifth time in succession at the head of the list of sires of winning dams.

"It was solely to oblige a friend, the late Mr. F. Gretton, with whose racing affairs he was at the time closely associated, consented to run Sterling for the Cambridgeshire in 1871, and few who saw that race will ever forget it, for surely a more exciting finish never was seen," writes Vigilant in a

PINKERTON PRAISES FAIR GROUNDS.

New Orleans, La., December 11.—Allan Pinkerton, Jr., who has succeeded to the position held by his late father, Robert A. Pinkerton, in the detective agency of that name, was a visitor at the Fair Grounds this afternoon. "I just dropped in from New York," said Mr. Pinkerton. "I expected to meet my uncle, William Pinkerton, here, but on my arrival found that he had not yet left California. I shall leave for Chicago tonight. I thought that I would take a run out to see the new track. They will have a beautiful park here when the plant is completed and I shall make an effort to run down again after the holidays."

TWO GRAND HORSES OF LONG AGO.

Senator Joe Blackburn's Recollections of Boston and American Eclipse.

"Race track devotees nowadays want quick action for their money," said Senator Blackburn of Kentucky, recently. "When I was a young man the betting proposition was subsidiary to the sport and was in the nature of side wagers between owners. Now racing has grown to be a game where every one is trying to get the best of the book-makers. I think every one who loves the thoroughbred for what he is and what he can do, regrets that he has of late years become, to a large extent, a tool of the gamblers."

"My father was among the first citizens of Kentucky who bred, trained and raced horses. Blackburn's Whip, whose blood has blended so kindly with trotters and thoroughbreds, was his property. Boston, sire of the immortal Lexington, died in my father's stable, and the great and unbeaten Eclipse was in my father's possession in the years 1837 and 1838. These horses were the champions of their day and the greatest horses of their generation; they were not furlong sprinters, but four-milers."

"It will hardly be believed in these days of palatial stables that while these valuable horses were in my father's care, they occupied a very ordinary log stable through which the winds whistled on wintry nights and through which the snow drifted on occasions. When Boston and Eclipse were brought to Kentucky they did not make the trip in palace cars, as do the costly thoroughbreds of today; walking was good enough for them, and it was by walking every inch of the route that they reached their destination."

"Boston caught cold on the way to Kentucky and went blind soon after his arrival. I was a small lad at the time and used to visit Boston's stable every morning to see him cared for and walked by the colored groom. In the fall of 1849, then seventeen years old, he began to grow decrepit from the effect of severe racing and duties in the stud and frequently had to be helped to rise. When on his feet he seemed to be all right again and able to take his morning exercise."

"Early one morning, in the year named, I slipped out of the house and down to Boston's stable. The door was closed and fastened within. I hammered on it and clamored for admittance. The door was cautiously opened far enough to admit the passage of my body, when a black hand seized me by the arm and dragged me inside. I was no sooner in than the groom was out and the door fastened. I took the matter good-naturedly until my eyes became accustomed to the light, when I saw something that curdled the blood in my young veins. Boston was lying on his side in a corner of his stall, lifeless, and great splashes of blood were on the wall. In his dying struggle he had beaten his head against the logs. I screamed lustily for the groom, and, seeing he had carried the joke far enough, he came to my rescue. My life has been in danger a score of times since on the battlefield and elsewhere, but I was never quite so badly scared."

"I presume I am among the very few men living who ever saw Boston. He was the greatest race horse and race horse sire of his day and his descendants are even now racing at Benning. He was bred by the late eminent jurist, John Wickham, of Richmond, Va., foaled in 1833 and was got by Timoleon, by Sir Archy, out of an own sister to Tuckahoe, by Ball's Florizel, a horse that during his turf career was never touched by whip or spur and was never beaten. The great-grand-dam of Boston was never fully traced. In his two-year-old form and while he was unbroken, he was sold to Nathaniel Reeves, of Richmond, Va., for $800."

"A peculiarity about him was that he could not be safely ridden with a spur. In his first race he bolted because his rider used a spur on him, and was distanced. He was never again ridden with a spur until he ran against Fashion, in his old age, and was beaten. In 1839 he became the property of James Long of this city, for $12,000 and half the purse."

"Boston was a chestnut horse, with a blaze in his face and white stockings behind. He stood fifteen hands, three inches under the standard, but looked taller on account of his prodigious size. He was a short-limbed horse, with unusually short cannon bones. His eye, ear and nostril were fine, but his head was not what you would call pretty. His neck came out well from the shoulders, the latter being oblique, broad and muscular. His depth of chest was immense and his throat perfect."

"His back was a prodigy of strength, as well as his loins, so that ten pounds' extra weight was not felt by him at the end of a hard day. The muscular development of his arms and thighs was almost unparalleled. He ran close to the ground and was not a long strider. Usually he began a race without much show of spirit, running the first two or three miles with his head nearly on a level with his back. When he began to get warm and interested in the running his head was gradually elevated, and when he drew it up he set to work in earnest. Then you saw a sure-enough race horse, for no locomotive on four legs that tried was ever able to go the race with him."

"Eclipse was also a chestnut horse, and was foaled nineteen years earlier than Boston, or to be exact, in 1814. Eclipse was by Duroc, by imported Diomed, the latter being Boston's great-grand-sire; dam Miller's Damsel, by Messenger, the great-grand-grand-sire of Hambletonian 10, founder of the Hambletonian family of trotters. He was bred by General Nathaniel Coles, of Long Island and his training commenced as a three-year-old."

"He had a star on the forehead and his left hind foot was white some distance above the ankle. In height he was about 15 hands 2 inches, but was built on a massive pattern. He was not a handsome horse, probably due to his Messenger blood through his dam. Duroc, his sire, was an exceedingly handsome horse. Eclipse's action in front was heavy, and he struck the ground heavy, dwelling a little, but the style and regularity with which he brought up his haunches and the power with which they propelled him forward, overbalanced all criticisms of his individuality and way of going."

"His temper was good and he required a good deal of work, and in his running a good deal of whipping. The account of his great race with Henry, which was virtually between the north and south, still thrills the blood of men who have an ounce of love for the thoroughbred in their hearts. Henry won by a head in the first heat, but Eclipse won the race. It is estimated that 25,000 people witnessed the race, and that over $200,000 in side bets changed hands."

"Eclipse lived to be thirty-three years old and died at the farm of Jilson Yates, near Shelbyville, Ky."—Washington Star.

KING LEASES TWO-YEAR-OLDS.

King Edward has leased the racing qualities of six yearlings from W. Hall Walker for next year. They have been turned over to trainer Marsh, who hopes to capture some of the chief races for two-year-olds in England next season.

GREAT YEARLING FIGURES.

recent number of the London Sportsman. "Sterling was three years old and handicapped at 123 pounds, and under the impression that his task was an impossible one Mr. Gretton, who then raced under the name of 'Mr. Blydoun,' did not consent to run him until the Saturday before the race, which was decided on Tuesday. The late Mr. Hamar Bass, who conveyed the message to Mr. Smith, was politely invited to 'sit down there and read the paper for a few minutes, and do not speak to any one until I come back.' In the course of half an hour the business was done and the huge bet of 66,000 to 1,000 was returned, with 1,500 to 100 for a place in addition. The horse ran and started at 20 to 1, the favorites being Henry, who was destined to win the Ascot Gold Cup in the year following; Favonius, the winner of the Derby; Vestminster, who had won the Cambridgeshire two years before, and Allbrook. The late Tom Chaloner rode Sterling, George Fordham was on Sabinus, and George Jarvis had the handling of Allbrook, who carried a pound overweight, which may just have cost him the victory. The last-named won everywhere but at that particular and important point at which the money is paid, and finally finished a dead heat with Sterling, but even that was not quite good enough to entitle him to a share of the spoils, for by an almost superhuman effort Fordham got there in the last stride with Sabinus, and literally snatched the verdict by a head. In my opinion that performance was never excelled by himself—and all his contemporaries, as well as most people who knew him, dubbed him the finest and most artistic jockey of all time—or any other rider, and it was grievously unfortunate for him that through an extraordinary lapse of memory he forgot who it was that had laid him 2,000 to 80 against Sabinus on the night before the race. Jockeys, I may add, were not prohibited from betting in those days. Thus a tremendous coup was just missed by Sterling, who, however, acquitted himself of one of the grandest performances in the history of racing, and Mr. Smith's judgment was fully vindicated by the result, as, indeed, was the case when, years afterward, Robert the Devil won the Cesarewitch. That was a remarkable instance of chance, for Mr. Brewer was on his way to Weatherbys to scratch the horse when he met his friend, was persuaded to turn back and 'have a bit of lunch,' discussed the matter, and finally decided to run and back the son of Bertram, which won in a canter."

At times the slap dash American comments on the British turf naturally riles its sporting journalist. Under the caption "Thumping Lies," the London Sportsman of November 28, says: "What can possess some of our visitors calling themselves sportsmen to take back home such ludicrous and abominable stories as they from time to time put about? This week we have received two specimens. A Chicago paper quotes one person as saying:

"The English trainer does not train. He turns up in the morning with a top hat and an eye-glass, and, after taking a cursory glance at the lay-out, departs with the assurance that he will see his assistant later in the day. He seldom keeps his word. The principal trainer seldom knows more than one or two horses in a stable of fifty. He pays little or no attention to the others unless they are engaged in important stakes. That may account for the frequent surprises."

The same journal of the same date whacks a Colonial critic in this style:

"From an obscure township in New Zealand comes the following cutting: 'In England, so far as he could gather, there were only two classes of people who went to the race meetings—the men who went to bet and the women who went to show off their dresses and themselves. To go to a race meeting for the mere pleasure of the sport, as so many did in the Colonies, was an almost unknown thing in England. Then the majority of the prizes were small. Except at Ascot and one or two other meetings, the majority of the races were for stakes of only a hundred pounds.'

The "Deutscher Sport" has been hunting up coincidences, and has discovered that the fact, even should the precocious three-year-old St. Obrian, run with his colt, now a yearling, of a meeting with father and son would not be a record, since in 1883 in the Leipzig Handicap Steeplechase Flohtaus ran side by side with his filly, Mauschen. Another record is also destroyed—that constituted by Charles Carter, which has won the Grand Baden Handicap five times running for M. Lienart, with a different horse and jockey, for the Grand Frankfurt Steeplechase was won for five consecutive times by the same horse, or rather mare, Victoria, belonging to Mr. Schawel and trained by G. Herbert, while the rider on each occasion was Mr. Hector Baltazzi."

Through Orby, $39,200, and Rhodora, $9,935, old Rhoda B., by Hanover—Marguerite, by Algerine, is on the winning list of English broodmares of 1907, at the $47,135 mark. Rhoda B. is only twelve years old.

The English three-year-old, Gorgos, by Ladas—The Gorgon, recently sold for a big price to the Duc de Grammont, has been sent to the big stud farm of that nobleman at Mortefontaine, France.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

The Brighton Beach Racing Association will apportion the Produce Stakes equally between the colts and fillies next year and not according to the number of each sex entered.

Jockey C. Henry, who is riding at New Orleans under the management of Frank Garrett, is regarded by experienced turfmen as a promising lightweight will be as popular as Delaby before the meeting is over.

The Brooklyn Jockey Club has re-named its Greenfield Steeplechase and it will be known as the Deerfoot for the first time next year. The reason for the change is the fact that the Metropolitan Jockey Club has a stake called the Greenfield.

George Thompson, who was the regular rider for the Oneck Stable a few years ago and afterwards went to England to ride, has become a horse owner. He has purchased the four-year-old chestnut filly, Queen's Bower, $1,200 being reported as the price paid for the filly.

Two new paintings will adorn the walls of the Gravesend club house next summer. One will be an old painting of the sire Lexington and is the gift of P. A. Renaud, the Texas breeder. The other is a likeness of Orby and is the gift of Richard Croker to P. J. Dwyer, president of the Brooklyn Jockey Club.

J. C. R., Detroit, Mich. Diamond Jubilee was sold for $150,000 to a South American breeder and is now located near the city of Buenos Ayres.

ENGLISH STARTING SYSTEM CRITICISM.

Augur, the veteran racing critic of the Sporting Life, condemns the English standing start in good set terms. He writes in a recent issue:

"That there is something very wrong with the present system of starting is an opinion that most folk who go racing will subscribe to, and on all hands one hears continually complaints made at the number of horses left at the post, or that fail to start on equal terms with their rivals. That it is not the fault of an individual starter is proven by the fact that the attempts to start 'from a stand' is a failure at all the meetings, no matter who may be officiating. Nor are the jockeys to blame, although they occasionally get hauled before the stewards and reprimanded or fined—and rightly so, too, when they are in fault. But, the plain truth is—the standing start, in conjunction with the starting gate, is a huge failure."

This is sharp evidence from a good judge and clearly antagonistic to the varied and illy balanced eastern criticism against the system used in this country.

After his statement, Augur gives a list of 442 horses, which were left at the post, or which got away so badly as to have no chance, the past season. The figures cover 119 meetings and the average holds well.

The most important courses saw most starting failures. Among them are Lincoln Spring Meeting, three days; twelve; Newbury Spring, two days, nine; Newmarket First Spring, four days, ten; Sandown Park, First Summer, two days, eight; Lincoln Autumn, two days, ten; Kempton Jubilee, two days, nine; Manchester, Whitsuntide, three days, ten; Salisbury, two days, nine; Lewes, June, two days, nine. There is no such bad starting average as is shown by the English figures at any American meeting long or short.
